Sodexo Global Chef Program Brings International Chef from Peru to Queen's University

Friday, March 6, 2015

KINGSTON, ON – Queen's University Hospitality Services will host one of Sodexo Peru's leading Chefs. Chef Claudia Alvarado Saldana, part of Sodexo's Global Chef Program, will prepare classic dishes from Peru and will provide active demonstrations of meal preparation that will involve Queen's students. The program provides ample opportunity for students to interact with the Chef and experience firsthand the cultural and educational benefits of her visit to campus.

The Global Chef Program is Sodexo's month-long international chef residency initiative that provides their top international chefs with the opportunity to travel the world and share their authentic international cuisine with students, faculty and staff. This program, which allows students to sample a slice of another culture while also exposing the local culinary staff to new techniques and flavours, is a great example of how Sodexo leverages its presence in 80 countries across the globe to benefit the entire campus community.
